

2023 Law and Humanities Interdisciplinary Workshop Call for Papers

Deadline for submissions: December 15, 2022

Contact email: juniorscholarsworkshop@sas.upenn.edu

2023 LAW AND HUMANITIES INTERDISCIPLINARY WORKSHOP Call for Participation

Georgetown University Law Center, Stanford Law School, UCLA School of Law, the University of Pennsylvania, and the University of Southern California Center for Law, History, and Culture invite submissions for the 22nd meeting of the Law and Humanities Interdisciplinary Workshop, to be held at Georgetown Law Center, Washington, DC, on May 24-25, 2023.

ABOUT THE WORKSHOP

The workshop is open to untenured professors, advanced graduate students, post-doctoral scholars, and independent scholars working in law and the humanities. In addition to drawing from numerous humanistic fields, including Black and Indigenous studies, history, literature, political theory, critical race theory, feminist theory, and philosophy, we welcome critical, qualitative work in the social sciences, including anthropology and sociology. While the scope of the Workshop is broad, we cannot consider proposals that are focused solely on quantitative social science research or that are limited to purely doctrinal legal research. We are especially interested in submissions from members of traditionally underrepresented groups and submissions touching on themes of anti-racism and anti-subordination. We welcome submissions from those working at regional and teaching-intensive institutions.

Based on anonymous evaluation by an interdisciplinary selection committee, between six and eight papers will be chosen for presentation at the Workshop. At the Workshop, two senior scholars will comment on each paper. Commentators and other Workshop participants will be asked to focus specifically on the strengths and weaknesses of the selected scholarly projects, with respect to subject and methodology. The selected papers will then serve as the basis for a larger conversation among all the participants that may include themes connecting all of the projects, as well as discussion of the evolving standards by which we judge excellence and creativity in interdisciplinary scholarship.

The selected papers will appear in a special issue of the Legal Scholarship Network; there is no other publication commitment. (We will accommodate the wishes of chosen authors who prefer not to have their paper posted publicly with us because of publication commitments to other journals.) However, we will only accept Workshop participants whose papers are true works in progress; articles or chapters that are already in page proofs or are otherwise unable to be revised by the time of the Workshop are ineligible.

The Workshop will pay the domestic travel and hotel expenses of authors whose papers are selected for presentation. For authors requiring airline travel from outside the United States, the Workshop will cover such travel expenses up to a maximum of $1250.

SUBMISSION INSTRUCTIONS

Applications should include a 1500-2000 word summary of the paper (including footnotes or endnotes), plus an optional 1-2 page bibliography, and, if your paper is a chapter in a book or dissertation, an optional 1-page chapter outline. Applications are due on December 15, 2022.

If your application advances to the final stage of consideration, you will be asked to submit the full paper on February 1, 2023. Please do not apply if you will not have a full paper on February 1. The application is intended to be a summary of existing, ongoing work rather than a proposal for new or planned work.

Final paper submissions must be works-in-progress that do not exceed 10,000 words in length (including footnotes/ endnotes). A dissertation chapter may be submitted, but we strongly suggest that it be edited so as to stand alone as a piece of work with its own integrity. A paper that has been submitted for publication is eligible for selection so long as it will not be in galley proofs or in print at the time of the Workshop; it is important that authors still be in a position at the time of the Workshop to consider comments they receive there and to incorporate them as they think appropriate in their revisions.

We ask that those submitting applications be careful to omit or redact any information in the paper summary or the body of the paper that might serve to identify them, as we adhere to an anonymous or “blind” selection process.

Applications (in Microsoft Word—no pdf files, please) will be accepted until December 15, 2022, and should be sent by e-mail to: juniorscholarsworkshop@sas.upenn.edu. Please be sure to include your name, institutional affiliation (if any), and phone and email contact information in your covering email, not in the paper itself. For more information, please send an email inquiry to juniorscholarsworkshop@sas.upenn.edu.

Ariela Gross, USC, Law & History, Chair
Aomar Boum, UCLA, Anthropology
Anne Dailey, UConn, Law
Sarah Barringer Gordon, Penn Law & History
Martha Jones, Johns Hopkins University, History
Sheraly Munshi, Georgetown University, Law
Simon Stern, University of Toronto, Law & English
Program Committee, 2023 Law and Humanities Interdisciplinary Workshop

The Law and Humanities Interdisciplinary Workshop is committed to anti-racism both inside and outside the academy.