

EU Day at the EUR, 2025

15 April, 2025 (09:00-17:00)

Woudestein Campus, venue (Theil gebouw CB-4)

Rationale:

2025 will be a pivotal year in the European R&I landscape, a year when the future of R&I policy and its investment program for the next 10 years will be shaped. Unlike the past 40 years, the next phase of the EU R&I agenda will be largely defined by the current geopolitical situation, and the strategic priorities of the EU. As foreseen by the EU's competitiveness compass, the R&I will be at the heart of European's competitiveness policy, and the R&I investments will be mainly geared towards bridging the innovation and tech gap with the US and China, decarbonization and increased security (defense). There is increased attention for strengthening European knowledge and innovation ecosystems, with a very active role for the fourth generation of universities. Scientists will be expected to actively engage with society, policy makers, industry, and moreover to actively collaborate with each other, across borders and disciplines.

What would this mean for our research, and what kind of opportunities and challenges are ahead of us will be the topics of 2025 EU Day at the EUR, that will take place on 15 April 2025, at Erasmus University Rotterdam, Woudestein campus.

Events objectives:

This special event is designed to help EUR's research community to navigate the evolving EU R&I policy and funding landscape, to connect with peers and experts, and to strengthen researchers' strategy, research careers and impact.

As a researcher, securing EU funding is not just about financial support. It is about expanding your impact, fostering collaborations, and positioning yourself at the forefront of international research. That is why we are bringing together leading experts, successful ERC laureates and principal investigators, and policymakers to share their insights, experiences, and strategies.
